आज म्हणे परिक्षा
तरीच लवकर आली रिक्षा

आई, बाबा आणि ताई
सर्वांनी केली घाई

नीट कर वजाबाकी, गुणाकर
नाहीतर मिळेल अंडयाचा आकर

नके मारू उडया,
नके करू खोडया

नीट कर अभ्यास
तरच होशील पास

जर झालास नापास, तर संपेल तुझी शाळा
मग मात्र कधीच नाही भेटणार तुला, खडू आणि फळा.

Developing healthy friendship

Friends play an important role in moulding a child's character. It is through friends that a child learns about social interactions, and about sharing and caring and being responsible. Children with few or no friends may feel lonely and lack confidence. Those with friends are usually cheerful and confident, and have high self esteem. So it's important for parents and teachers to help a child to have healthy friendships.

Here are few points that can help you in this context.

Group play: Encourage the child to interact and make friends. Arrange play groups of children of same age. Engaging them in an activity like painting, or playing a game will encourage them to bond and share things while having fun.

Handle conflicts tactfully: It is quite natural for some conflicts to rise among children when they are playing. Make your child understand that hurting others or speaking rudely is unacceptable.

Build your child's social skills: Explain to your child that good friends share, take turns, listen to each other, and don't bully, hit, or tease one another.

Safe play environments: Since children are full of energy, always make sure that their surroundings are child friendly. Always remove sharp, heavy objects that are likely to cause accidents and injuries from the play area.

Encourage the habit of sharing: Teach them to care for, and respect things belonging to others. Praise your child when he/she shares his/her things with friends.

Talk to your child's teachers: Parents should talk to their teachers about their child's social interactions and friends at school. Teachers will be able to tell parents which areas of a child's social skills need to be worked on.
